OFFICE OF STRATEGIC RESEARCH

22 April 1970

Office Notice 20-1

PERSONNEL

ESTABLISHMENT OF AD HOC BOARD ON
ROTATION AND REASSIGNMENT

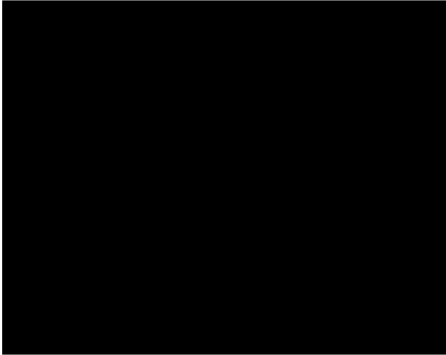

1. The Office of Strategic Research has a wide range of activities within its area of responsibility for intelligence analysis on Communist military forces. One major component is the current intelligence reporting arm for all military developments and military-related scientific and technical developments, and as such has a responsibility to OSI and FMSAC as well as to the work of OSR. Two components are charged with research analytical work on the forces of the Soviet Union and East Europe and those of Communist China and North Korea. The fourth major component is responsible for military-economic and political-military analysis on Soviet and other forces. This wide range of responsibilities in OSR--varying both in the nature of the work (i.e., current and research) and in the subjects and countries concerned--affords the opportunity for widely varied career experiences within OSR.

2. It is the policy of the Office of Strategic Research to encourage persons in OSR to develop their careers through experience in as broad a range of the Office's responsibilities as they wish to have. To spell out the details of implementing this policy, taking into account the needs of the Office and the career development interests of the persons in OSR, an Ad Hoc Board on Rotation and Reassignment is established.
